

The ministry that I do is to connect the heart of environmental sustainability with communities of faith. I am passionate about helping people respond to the environmental crisis we face in ways that are community-based, hopeful, and inspirational. I would like to talk to you this morning about how we can find a new basis for caring for creation in our tradition. . . .

[Listen to or watch the video to hear more about the church's role in responding to climate change.]