

So, this week as I was preparing my sermon, I decided to look back at times in the past when I had preached sermons on sex and sexuality in order to remind myself of what I had done before. One thing that actually surprised me was the sense of confidence I had in those sermons. Now, years later, a little more mature, a little more experienced, I find this issue far more complex and mysterious than I did back then.